Be a booster; bury the hammer. By united effort we can make Concrete one of the best towns in the county. Try it.

THE CONCRETE HERALD

The upper Skagit valley is the land of opportunity. Its resources are unlimited, but publicity and development are needed.

Formerly the Hamilton Herald, Established Nov. 23, 1901. Oldest Paper in the Upper Skagit

VOLUME XXVII | CONCRETE, SKAGIT COUNTY, WASHINGTON, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 1, 1928 | NUMBER 47

RECORD VOTE WILL BE CAST TUESDAY AT GENERAL ELECTION

ONLY CONTESTS ARE ON STATE AND NATIONAL OFFICERS—CITY WILL HAVE TWO POLLING PLACES

Next Tuesday one of the most bitterly fought political campaigns for many years will come to a close, and a few hours after the polls close the winner will be known, and the country will settle down to normal business again.

As far as Skagit county is concerned, there are only three contests, for president, for United States Senator and for governor. The only county officials to be named are three commissioners, three state representatives, and a superior court judge, and there is only one candidate for each office. There are several state offices for which there are opposing candidates but with the exception of grvernor, the election of the Republican candidate is conceded. Lindley H. Hadley, Republican candidate for congressman from this district, has an opponent from King county, running on an independent ticket, so Hadley's re-election is certain.

In each of the three big contests the final result seems so uncertain that political experts are giving guesses instead of the usual forecasts. Because of the large normal Republican majority in the nation, it is generally believed that Hoover will be elected president, although no real Democrat is admitting defeat, and many think Smith has better than an even chance of being elected. On account of the greatly increased registration throughout the nation, it is likely that the losing candidate will have a larger popular vote than was given Coolidge four years ago. On governor and senator the result is very much in doubt, with the chances apparently favoring the Democratic candidates. In the Concrete precincts, indications are that Hoover will carry the precincts by a small majority, but that Bullitt will have a small lead over Hartley and with Mackintosh and Dill polling about the same vote as Hoover and Smith.

On account of the large registration, there will be two polling places in the city for the general election. The voters in East Concrete will vote at the city hall and will use the machine. It is urged that as many as possible vote early in the day, to prevent congestion in the afternoon and evening, as it is expected that almost the full registered vote will be cast, making a total for East Concrete almost as large as the total for both precincts at the primary election. The polls will open at 8 o'clock in the morning and remain open until 8 in the evening.

SOME CONCRETE VOTERS SHOULD REGISTER AGAIN

As there will be two polling places at the general election, the registration books will of necessity be separated, the East Concrete books at the City Hall and West Concrete books at the Odd Fellows hall. Persons who have registered in one precinct and moved to the other since registering, should come in and have their registration transferred to the proper book. This will avoid confusion when they go to vote, and may save going to both polling places before being able to vote. Transfers can be made at any time before Monday evening.

COUNCIL MEETING MONDAY

The town council will hold its egular meeting next Monday evening, November 5, to take care of whatever business may be on hand. So far as known, there are only routine matters to come up fo attention. The current bills for Ortover will be paid, if the bills are filed in time for the meeting.

The Duty of Every Citizen

SCOTT BULLITT MAKING HARD RACE FOR GOVERNOR

The contest for the governorship of the State of Washington is one of the hardest fought in the history of the state and it will not be known until the votes are counted next Tuesday evening whether the next governor will be Roland H. Hartley or A. Scott Bullitt. Mr. Bullitt is making a strong contest for the office and present indications are that he has better than an even chance of being returned the winner. He is well qualified for the office in every way and will make an excellent governor if he should be elected.

Mr. Bullitt is in favor of building up the State of Washington, and has promised to work for anything that will be for the best interests of the state. He is a strong booster for permanent roads and has endorsed the good roads' program of the Washington Automobile club. The friction between Gov. Hartley and the other members of the highway board has resulted in a curtailing of highway construction in the state for the past two years, and the state as a whole has suffered. Mr. Bullitt says he will work with the other state officials and with the legislature. He will be given a big vote in Concrete, many Republicans being in favor of his election to end the present strife at the state capitol.

LITTLE DAMAGE DONE IN CITY DURING HALLOWE'EN

Last night was Hallowe'en, the annual nightmare for the marshal, business men and the people in general. The occasion passed off peaceably in Concrete, many of the usual pranks being played, but no real damage being done. There was the regular soaping of windows by the smaller boys, and many windows received their first washing this morning since last Hallowe'en. A few outhouses were tipped over, articles left outside last night were mysteriously missing this morning, and in many cases articles were found that did not belong on the premises. The Superior Mercantile had a new "warehouse", Marshal Owen was minus a gate, Supt. Bolton's kindling started some neighbor's fire, and Joe Janisch has sworn off on free "nigger babies" on account of soaped windows. Manager Stickley of the Concrete Theater, got away from the soap by offering a free show to the kids Monday if his windows were unsoaped. Commissioner Bauman left his car on Main street last night and had to wash all his glass before he could drive home. The kids had a good time, but without destroying property, which is as it should be.

BOLTON CHOSEN TO HEAD TEACHERS' ASSOCIATION

Officers of the Skagit County Teachers association were elected in Bellingham last Friday in connection with the meetings of the Washington Educational association. Edwin L. Bolton, superintendent of the Concrete schools, was honored by being chosen as president of the association for the coming year. The other officers are: vice-president, J. M. Campbell, Sedro-Woolley; secretary, Maurice Windus, Mount Vernon; treasurer, G. W. Greene, Anacortes; board of directors, C. P. Shangle, Sedro-Woolley, Mrs. Stella Nolan Hamilton, Miss Anna Peterson, La-Conner, Miss Margaret Ward, Mount Vernon, Miss Ina M. Olson, McMurray and Miss Hazel Ekestran, Allen.

CONCRETE HIGH SCHOOL TO PLAY SEDRO-WOOLLEY

The football fans of this city will have a chance to see a close and exciting game tomorrow afternoon, when the Concrete high school meets the Sedro-Woolley second team on the local grounds. These teams met in Sedro-Woolley earlier in the season and Concrete won the game by the narrow margin of 7 to 6, indicating that the teams are evenly matched. The boys are hoping to have a large attendance, to root for Concrete and to help out the finance.

Next week the Concrete team goes to Hamilton for a game against Hamilton, and it is likely that nearly the whole high school and many others will go down to take in the contest.

POLITICAL TALK WILL BE GIVEN IN CITY SUNDAY

The political spellbinders of both parties have been passing up this city this campaign, but there will be at least one campaign speech in the city before the balloting starts. Jack Wallace, a miner, will be in the city Sunday afternoon and will talk on Main street on the issues of the campaign from a workingman's standpoint. Mr. Wallace is a Republican and is said to be a fine talker. Although Main street in Concrete is usually deserted on a Sunday afternoon, it is hoped that all who are interested in hearing a good campaign talk will come out and hear him. The arrangements for the speaking were made too late for any further announcement.

LOCAL THEATER OFFERS VARIED ENTERTAINMENT

The Concrete theater offers a variety of entertainment for the coming week, and all the movie fans are certain to find something that will please.

On Saturday night Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton, two of the most popular of the movie comedians, are featured in "The Big Killing." In this picture they play the parts of two mountaineers, with feuds, gun-play, moon-shiners, and other thrills mixed into the action. It is rated as one of their best comedies and one that will please all who see it.

On Sunday and Monday nights Clara Bow will be seen in "The Fleet's In," a comedy-drama that shows this popular star at her best. It is a story of a sailor and his sweetheart, and includes a number of interesting naval scenes. There are plenty of laughs, a pleasing romance, and some splendid acting.

For Tuesday and Wednesday nights the attraction will be Ramon Navarro in "A Certain Young Man," a comedy-romance of a philandering young English lord and his adventures among the young ladies. The supporting cast includes Marceline Day, Renee Adoree and Carmel Myers.

On Sunday and Monday nights Hoot Gibson comes in "Clearing the Trail", a drama of the western cattle country in which Gibson cleans out a gang of cattle rustlers and also wins the girl. This picture will please those who like thrills and excitement.

PLANS ARE GOING AHEAD FOR THE COMMUNITY TREE

The plans for the Community Christmas tree are going ahead rapidly and it is expected that the orgaization of the various committees will be completed before next week, and all will settle down to work at once. It is planned to have an early start this year, so that everything will be ready before the night of the big entertainment.

Last year there were 450 children who were remembered with a small present and a treat of fruit, nuts and candy, and this year there will be more. The plan to raise the necessary funds is to ask the various organizations of the city to make contributions and to give entertainments. The first of these will be a Christmas Fund dance, to be given in the Legion hall on Friday evening, November 16. Remember the date and be sure to buy a ticket.

NEED OF DAIRYMEN IS FOR BETTER COWS IN SKAGIT COUNTY

MANAGER OF COUNTY ASSOCIATION TELLS VIEWS ON SITUATION—BELIEVES THAT HERDS SHOULD BE BUILT UP.

The big need of Skagit county dairymen is for more and better cows, according to Manager P. A. Cornelius of the Skagit County Dairymen's association, who explains his stand on the matter of cow sales, by stating that instead of ridding the herds of the poorer producers, the sales usualy send the best cows out of the county. C. R. Bergstrom, county agent, agrees with Cornelius, that better producing cows would make the dairy business more profitable in the county.

According to Mr. Bergstrom, the average butterfat production of the cows of this county, amounts to about 235 pounds per year, while a production of 300 pounds is necessary for a dairyman to make money from a cow. Bergstrom estimates that there are 23,000 cows in Skagit county and of these about 2,000 are in cow testing associations, under the jurisdiction of his office. The average butterfat production of the cows in the testing association is 339.8 pounds, Bergstrom stated. The average test should be between 350 and 400 pounds for the most profitable results, Bergstrom stated.

In emphasizing the need of better cows in this county, in the existing herds, before additional cows were considered, Manager Cornelius of the Dairymen's association, brings out the following facts:

First, Skagit county is a dairy section of the state; second, climatic conditions favor the development of dairying in this county; third, the increased outlet for dairy products and fluid milk for the city trade, favors continued dairying.

Fourth, Skagit county needs more and better cows; fifth, Skagit county dairymen cannot get better cows by selling their best ones, and keeping poor breeding stock for future herds, we will have an annual surplus of cows for sale.

"Buyers of dairy cattle will continue to come to Skagit county, he says, just as long as there are good, healthy cows available here. Dairymen, who expect to remain in the dairying business in this section, must look forward to building up more profitable herds, and want to keep in mind that by selling now, they may have to repurchase at a higher price. Nothing in these arguments against the present cow sales practice is intended to be a recommendation for any man to keep his surplus cows."

SUNDAY SCHOOL CLASSES ENTERTAINED AT PARTY

The junior boys and junior girls of the Presbyterian Sunday school were entertained at a delightful Hallowe'en party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Baxter Wednesday evening, Mrs. F. H. Roller assisting with the entertaining. The youngsters spent the evening in playing games and in having a general good tim, finishing up with a fine luncheon.

MAIN STREET PAVEMENT IS NOW BEING REPAIRED

The broken places in the pavement on Main street, between the hill and "A" street are now being repaired and it looks as if the job fill be completed before the end of the week. L. R. Everett is in charge of the work, and started work the latter part of last week. For the past few days he has been pouring cement, and this part of the job is about completed.

TOWNSHIP PLAN IS OPPOSED BY BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS

STATEMENT ISSUED TO SHOW THAT TOWNSHIP ORGANIZATION WILL INCREASE TAXES AND DISRUPT ROAD PROGRAM

The board of commissioners of Skagit county has been digging into records from various counties having the township form of government, looking into its advantages, if any, and also studying the question of what effect it would have on axes and county affairs in general. From all information gathered, the board reached the conclusion that township organization would be harmful to the county as a whole, and issued a statement showing why and how it would increase taxes, and urging the voters to vote against it.

Whatcom county now has township organization, and as conditions there are pretty much the same as in Skagit county, the workings of township government in that county was closely investigated. The commissioners found that in nearly all the townships, the law is not being found satisfactory. It was also found that taxes are uniformly higher in Whatcom county than in Skagit, and that the roads built and maintained by the townships are not in as good condition as similar roads in this county.

The figures show that the total state and county levy in Skagit county for 1928 is 32.20 mills, and in Whatcom county it is 35.53. The current expense levy in Whatcom is 7.57 mills and in Skagit is 5.56; for road and bridge fund, Whatcom collects 4.98 mills, while Skagit county gets by on 3.97 mills. These levies are for county purposes and the township taxes are additional. The township government plan does not do away with any county offices, the same officials being retained for the county, and the salaries remaining the same. The new plan does not even reduce the number of deputies in any office in the county courthouse, but it does add a new bunch of officeholders to be maintained at the expense of the taxpayers. It is estimated that adoption of the township plan would create about 100 new office holders in the third commissioner district, all of whom would be drawing salaries raised by new taxes in the various townships.

However, it is in its effect on the road construction and maintenance program that the new plan would do the most damage. Each township would have to build and maintain its own roads, and raise the funds for the purpose by taxes on property in the township. A township with many miles of roads and a low assessed valuation would soon be without passable roads, as it would be impossible to raise money enough to keep them in condition. In any township the road levy would have to be more than the present district levies to keep the roads up. Also Skagit county has much money invested in road-building equipment, which is available for use in keeping up the roads and in building new ones. It would not be feasible to divide this up among the different townships, and no township would be financially able to buy its own machinery. This would mean that the townships would have to spend more money for poorer roads.

The township government does not apply to incorporated towns, but it applies to them, as it will raise taxes in the cities as well as in the rural communities. The safe plan is for everyone to vote on the question, and to vote "No."

BOY SCOUTS GIVE PARTY

The Concrete troop of Boy Scouts entertained their parents at a Hallowe'en party at the Scout hall Tuesday evening. The boys gave a short program, including a short play, after which a social hour was spent. The session closed with the serving of Hallowe'en "eats", including sandwiches, cider and popcorn.

Athletes Get Too Much Attention, Says Teacher

Too much time is wasted celebrating athletic victories by students, business men and the public generally, while a "lamentable lack of appreciation is accorded scientific attainments," Prof. Ira B. Cross of the University of California believes.

Addressing the Lions club at Berkeley, Calif., the economic instructor criticized Berkeleyans who greeted members of the university crews, victors in the Olympic shell races at Amsterdam. Only two men who rowed in the winning race arrived home, but schools were given a half holiday.

"If Doctor Millikan, discoverer of the cosmic ray, a truly wonderful feat, paid a visit to Berkeley, would he be given the welcome that these two oar pullers were accorded?" asked Professor Cross. "Of course not, he would hardly be noticed."

The professor also deplored Berkeley's attempt to attract industries, declaring that the city "cannot remain an intellectual center and also become a factory town."

Chicago White Sox Were Strong on Pop-Up Flies

Tommy Connolly, the veteran American league umpire, relays this one from Joe Berger, the shortstop of the Chicago White Sox some years back.

The White Sox were in a disastrous hitting slump and their turn at bat was just one pop-up after another. It was getting on the nerves of the players.

Berger was going to his position in the field just after an inning in which three of his mates had popped up to the infield. He sighed a sigh as he passed Connolly. "Tommy," he said, "some day we're going to run across a team that's weak on those pop-ups and were going to beat them to death."

Haskell Indians Living Up to Nomadic Instincts

The Haskell Indians will defend their title of the "most traveled" college football team again this fall. Of a ten-day schedule only two will be played at the stadium of Haskell institute at Lawrence while road trips will take the braves from New Orleans to Minnesota and east nearly to the Atlantic seaboard.

Fifty Indians, representing twenty-four tribes over twenty-two states comprise the 1928 squad. Teams to be played include the University of West Virginia, Loyola of New Orleans, Minnesota university, St. Xavier of Cincinnati and Loyola of Chicago.

SUPERSTITIONS OF COACH McMILLAN

Former Centre College Football Star Played Hunches.

Bo McMillan, the famous and colorful Centre college quarterback of a few years ago, who took Charley Bachman's place as head coach of the Kansas Aggies, has a thousand and one football superstitions. At least he did have them while he went to school. Perhaps, as a coach, he has found superstitions do not win games and has discarded them, but anyway he had them at one time. And how!

Bo had a blue shirt and a red necktie, for instance, that he never failed to wear whenever Centre went on a trip. He put them on when he dressed to leave town and kept them on, except for the time he wore his football suit, until he returned. Now Centre in those days took a number of long trips. The team played on both the East and West coasts. But even on trips that kept him on the hop for a week he stuck to that old shirt and necktie though soot lined the wrinkles of both.

Bo also had an old belt he wore in high school down at Fort Worth. He kept it when he went to college and never went into a game without it. Oh, yes, quite superstitious. He even made over every pair of football pants he wore at Centre, if just to tear open the seams and sew them again himself.

Centre was a much photographed team in its winning years, and not the least photographed by any means of all the men was Bo. However, for all the insistent attempts of the photographers to snap him before a game, and insistent is right, they never could. Bo would have none of it. After the game, all right, but before—never.

He insisted further on being the last man to enter the park, the last man to leave the dressing room and the last man to set foot on the field. Even Charley Moran, the coach, had to precede him.

Of superstitious nature, he naturally played the wildest hunches. One night before a big game Bo dreamed he ought to put a pair of dice on the roof of a certain high building. No sooner dreamed than done. He got up the next morning, put on his sooty blue shirt and red necktie, picked out a high building and stuck the dice, "snake eyes" up, in a cornice.

Centre won the game.

Golf Ball Strikes Tree and Is Holed Out in One

The 150-yard No. 3 hole of the Highland Park course in Birmingham, Ala., is an easy par 3 or a hard 5 and is famous as a place where freak shots are becoming the rule rather than the exception.

Joe Spain, Birmingham amateur, was trailing in a threesome when they reached No. 3. He pulled his mashie shot over the trees bordering a street and the ball landed on a concrete uphill driveway. Taking a kick backward, the ball came through the boughs of the trees and landed a few feet off the green, from where Spain, still using his mashie, clouted it into the cup for a birdie.

Col. Karl Landgrebe's hole in 1 on No. 3, however, still remains the outstanding freak shot of the course. With a tremendous drive from the tee, the colonel sent his ball sailing down the fairway to the right of the green, where it struck a tree trunk, caromed to the green and rolled several club lengths into the cup.

Timm Is Big Help

"Big" Timm from Idaho is putting up an excellent game in the backfield for Coach Zuppke this fall. He is mighty fast on his feet and is a valuable asset to the team.

Big Al Weston Is Back Again in Eagle Uniform

Al Weston, ace of the Boston college backfield the last three years, set at rest all rumors that he would not play football this year when he appeared in a uniform the other day.

The big Needham boy declared that, inasmuch as he had played football last fall and had been playing baseball practically every day since early spring, he thought a week's rest would do no harm and perhaps some good. He looked to be in perfect condition and spent the afternoon following the new plays as put on by a temporary first team.

Another newcomer was Frank Lyons, former Newton High star, and a substitute back the last two years. His work as caddy master at Brae Burn has kept him in good condition.

TAMMANY IDEA NOT WELCOME IN SOUTH

Lifelong Democrats Indorse G. O. P. Candidate.

Thousands of letters continue to pour into Republican National headquarters extolling the fitness of Hoover for the Presidency and citing the reasons why many old Democrats are finding themselves voting for a Republican for the first time this year. The letters are from every section of the country and represent every scale of society, yet they are alike in their admiration of the candidate.

From the bayous of Louisiana, C. Cottingham, president of Louisiana college at Pineville turns from his educational pursuits to say, "You need only to call on me for any special service I may render Hoover. The state of Louisiana will cast the largest Republican vote in its history and some of the southern states will go Republican, I am sure."

In New York city, George L. Upshur, lifelong Democrat and a son of the late Rear Admiral Upshur, visits the Republican speakers' bureau to tell Col. John Q. Tilson that Governor Smith symbolizes the return of the legalized liquor traffic and the Tammany idea in politics. The old South, solidly Democratic for so long, is weakening, he said.

Rock-ribbed Republican West Virginia will remain that way, Charles E. Carrigan of Charleston writes. The national ticket, headed by Herbert Hoover, has the unqualified respect of Virginians and the local ticket as well as the state ticket are both unusually strong in the present campaign, according to Mr. Carrigan.

"The main issue of the campaign is the continuation of prosperity and high wages under a Republican administration," says Representative Hamilton Fish, Jr., of the Twenty-sixth New York district. "Mr. Ruskob knows better than the majority of American people that prosperity as not been a myth and it is particularly unbecoming of him to deny it," he added.

"The state of New York has a lot of farmers who are laughing at the idea of Governor Smith going West to solve the farmer's problem. They have never indorsed him as their candidate in their own state and they know that his knowledge of farming and relief was gained through a pullman car window," Representative Fish declared.

Mellon Makes Strong Appeal for Hoover

Business is business with Andrew Mellon and he looks at it unbiased by politics. According to an editorial which appeared in the Binghamton (N. Y.) Press, Mr. Mellon finds "no cause for worry," and the Press finds that his views are a powerful indorsement of Hoover.

The editorial states, "For legitimate business purposes, Mr. Mellon reports, money is generally available at from 5 to 6 per cent. He believes the outpouring of gold to Europe, which has been responsible for the high money rates of the last year, has been halted.

"There may be no important movement of metal back to the United States in the next year, but the theory of the federal reserve bankers is that American trade will be permanently helped by permitting our gold reserves to work for other nations for a time.

"What is chiefly needed is a continuance of the Coolidge stability. The election of Mr. Hoover means a continuation of that policy. Therefore Mr. Mellon makes one of the strongest arguments for Mr. Hoover that has yet been made."

Arkansas Not for Smith

Arkansas is safe for Hoover, Col. John Q. Tilson of the Republican National committee was assured by former State Senator J. H. Keel, a veteran of sixteen years in the state legislature of Arkansas. He called at the office of the head of the speakers' bureau to say that the revolt in Arkansas against the Smith-Robinson ticket would assure the Republican victory.

"The most astonishing thing in the political history of the state is the disruption in the ranks of the Democrats this year," Senator Keel said. "Democrats all over the state interpret the nomination of Al Smith as an attempt to Tammanyize the nation.

"The Democratic leaders of our state have fallen back on the old argument of race prejudice and white rule, but I do not think that it is going to avail for them. The preachers of the state are almost solidly against Smith."

Passing by his statesmanship and ability to lead the nation to new achievement and prosperity for the moment, there is nothing more reassuring in the political picture than the honesty and straightforwardness of Herbert Hoover.

Compare the Candidates

It is evident that Governor Smith regards the farm problem as the supreme challenge to the next administration. Which is better fitted to deal with it—Hoover, the product of an Iowa farm with world-wide experience in great business enterprises, and with the co-operation of another product of the wheat and corn belt, Charles Curtis, or the governor of a seaboard state, without a farm background or any intimate knowledge of farm conditions?—Kansas City Star

Lesson for November 4

WORLD'S TEMPERANCE SUNDAY

LESSON TEXT—Romans 13:1-14.

GOLDEN TEXT—Love worketh no ill to his neighbor, therefore love is the fulfilling of the law.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Obedience to Law.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Obedience to Law.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Reasons for Prohibition.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Standing for Law Enforcement.

I. The Christian's Obligation to the State (vv. 1-7).

The believer in Christ is a citizen as well as a Christian. Intelligent Christians will be loyal to the state as well as to the church. Failure to recognize this has brought Christianity into disrepute in many quarters.

1. Obedience to rulers (vv. 1-4).

This obligation is upon all Christians. The reason is that civil government is ordained of God and rulers are His representatives. To refuse obedience to civil authority is to resist God. This does not mean that a Christian at the behest of the state should do that which is inherently wrong. Submission to rightly constituted authority is the law of the believer's life, not only because God is the source of civil authority, but because it was ordained for beneficent ends.

2. The spirit in which the Christian renders obedience to rulers (v. 5).

He should regard it as his obligation, not merely because it serves a good purpose, but because it is morally right. It is a conscientious obligation to obey lawful rulers.

3. Method of expressing this obedience (vv. 6, 7).

(1) In the payment of personal and property taxes.

The citizens who enjoys the benefits of government is morally bound to support it.

(2) Payment of duty upon merchandise and license fees.

The business exchange between nations must be regulated. For such regulations expense is incurred, for which benefit the citizen should pay.

(3) Veneration of magistrates ("fear to whom fear").

Those who have the fear of God in their hearts will venerate their rulers, God's representatives.

(4) "Honor to whom honor."

This means that civil officers should be honored because of their service.

II. The Christian's Obligation to His Fellow Citizens (vv. 8-10).

This is summed up in the word "love." This obligation is perpetual. The only debt which is right to owe is that of love. The discharge of this obligation forbids:

(1) Defrauding in matters of property (v. 8).

(2) It forbids going into debt with no certainty of being able to meet one's obligation.

(3) It forbids defrauding in matters of moral purity (v. 9). Where the life is under the power of love, adultery cannot be committed.

(4) It forbids murder.

(5) It forbids stealing.

(6) It forbids coveting.

(7) It forbids the working of any ill to one's neighbor.

III. The Supreme Motive Governing the Life of the Christian (vv. 11-14).

The attitude of the Christian is that of eager expectancy. There is no time for slumber or indifference. The time of salvation is drawing near. The salvation here mentioned is not that which we obtain in justification and sanctification, but is that which we get when our redemption is completed in glorification at the second coming of Christ. Redemption is threefold:

1. Justification through faith in the blood of Jesus.

2. Sanctification through the obedience of the Word.

3. Glorification, when the fullness of redemption shall be realized at Christ's second coming.

The reasons for this attitude of expectancy are that the night of Christ's absence is far spent and the day of His glorious appearing is at hand. The proper conduct in view of this is:

1. To put off the works of darkness (v. 12), which are revelling, drunkenness, chambering, wantonness, strife and jealousy. The child of light will not walk in drunken carousals, will not practice licentious acts and debauchery, neither engage in strife, nor be under the spell of jealousy.

2. Put on the armor of light (v. 12).

The figure here is of the Roman soldier who arose from sleep and put off his slumber robes and put on his gleaming armor.

3. Put on the Lord Jesus Christ (v. 14).

This means to enthrone Jesus Christ as the Lord of the life, to bring the life under His control.

Roman Relics in England

Remarkable Roman relics are being revealed on Prysg field, Caerleon, near Newport, England, where the most important Roman fortress site in Britain is situated. Great walls, ramparts, look-out turrets, a massive stone water tank, centurions' quarters, and even those of the legion commander are now visible. A quantity of bronze sword trappings, pottery, catapults, and sling stones have been recovered.

The Doctor

It is essential that my car should always operate properly and accordingly I use Champion Spark Plugs.

Champion is the better spark plug because it has an exclusive sillimanite insulator specially treated to withstand the much higher temperatures of the modern high-compression engine. Also a new patented solid copper gasket-seal that remains absolutely gas-tight under high compression. Special analysis electrodes which assure a fixed spark-gap under all driving conditions.

When your Children Cry for It

Castoria is a comfort when Baby is fretful. No sooner taken than the little one is at ease. If restless, a few drops soon bring contentment. No harm done, for Castoria is a baby remedy, meant for babies. Perfectly safe to give the youngest infant; you have the doctors' word for that! It is a vegetable product and you could use it every day. But it's in an emergency that Castoria means most. Some night when constipation must be relieved—or colic pains—or other suffering. Never be without it; some mothers keep an extra bottle, unopened, to make sure there will always be Castoria in the house. It is effective for older children, too; read the book that comes with it.

Fletcher's CASTORIA

Superb Tact

"Who is that plain little old woman over there, John? She tried to open a conversation with me, but I cut her off short. One has to be particular in a place like this." "Now that was tactful of you, Emily. She is only the wife of my boss . . . and he's just asked me to bring you in to dinner with them!"

Use Reason in Command

Truly, a command of gall cannot be obeyed like one of sugar. A man must require just and reasonable things, if he would see the scales of obedience properly trimmed. From orders which are improper springs resistance, which is not easily overcome.—Basil.

Lake Has Own Fauna

Fish in Lake Baikal are not typical of Arctic ocean variety. They are more like the fish fauna of the North temperate region in general, but in detail they are peculiar to Lake Baikal, because that lake has been isolated for long eons of time, and therefore has developed a fauna peculiar to itself.

Coveted Distinction

The initials "K. C.," after a man's name in Great Britain are conferred by royal patent upon barristers of distinction. It gives certain rights of procedure over barristers not so honored, and is a highly valued distinction.

Domestic Adjustments

It is not a bad guess, says a prominent medical authority, that 5 per cent of the better educated women in America find it very hard to adjust themselves to the duties and limitations of domesticity.—Woman's Home Companion.

LEADERS OF NATION INDORSE AL SMITH

List Must Be Impressive to Thoughtful Voter

Every day new names are added to the very impressive list of nationally prominent men and women who have announced publicly that they will support Governor Smith.

That list is not confined to men who, like Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia university, hold that the Hoover policy on prohibition is "opposed to the principles upon which our government rests." Though it includes many of America's most eminent figures of business and finance, neither is it confined to men of wealth.

It is a list which includes women and men alike, learned thinkers and educators, leaders of farm organizations, national and international labor union officials, army and navy officers of high rank, former Republican office holders and men who have been prominently identified with the prohibition cause.

The opinions of such men as John J. Raskob, Doctor Butler, Pierre S. Dupont, chairman of General Motors corporation; William H. Woodin, president of the American Car and Foundry company; August Heckshe[r], philanthropist; Samuel Rea, former president of the Pennsylvania railroad; Henry H. Curran, former Republican candidate for mayor of New York, and Brig. Gen. W. D. Potter, will be, and must be, universally respected.

The conscientious convictions of such prominent and able women as Mrs. Caspar Whitney, former first vice chairman of the National League of Woman Voters, who was on Herbert Hoover's committee for Belgium relief during the war, and Mrs. Mary Harriman Rumsey, daughter of the late E. H. Harriman, financier, and herself a leader in social, philanthropic and civic affairs, must command the respectful consideration of those members of their sex who have looked, and who will still look to them for leadership.

No vicious personal attack can possibly detract from the influence and character of such men and women as these; their intelligent capability and high integrity is an accepted fact. When they say they are against Hoover because they "hate hypocrisy," or oppose "social debauchery" and "corruption" and "evasion" and "government-made crime," the statement of their convictions is not to be disputed

Republicans Hold Out No Hope to Farmer

The distress of American farmers which Governor Smith has promised to correct is vividly demonstrated in figures cited by E. Clemens Horst in the Daily Commercial News of San Francisco. Mr. Horst shows that the average daily proceeds on the average American farm is less than $6.

This is the amount of revenue produced each day by the typical 154-acre farm, with taxes deducted. From this $6 the farmer must take his own wages, pay wages to those of his family that work on the farm, pay wages to all hired help, interest on his mortgage, and interest on his borrowings to raise his crop, pay for supplies and equipment and insurance, take account of depreciation of soil and equipment, and meet a large variety of miscellaneous expenses. Whatever is left out of the $6 is profit, but there is nothing left, as the growing farm debt and bankruptcies testify.

In spite of such facts as these, and the many others of similar character referred to by Governor Smith in pledging himself to the farmer's cause, Herbert Hoover boasts about Republican rule. When Mr. Hoover talks about prosperity he seems to leave the farmer out.

Recognize Smith's Worth

"Smith Republicans" are for the Democratic candidate because they believe him to be the more honest and the more eminently fitted for the high office of President of the United States.

Intellectual leaders are for Smith because his constructiveness, his knowledge of the science of government, his high courage and admirable candor are not to be found in the party they have renounced. Farm leaders are for Smith because they believe his promise that he will give farmers the relief they failed to get under eight years of Republican administration. Labor leaders favor him because "during his 25 years in public office he has proved himself to be a devoted and invaluable friend of the working man."

In short, the reason for the unprecedented break in party ties is that on all important issues Governor Smith has definite, courageously avowed programs, while Hoover has met them only with political "flubdubbery," evasions and meaningless generalities.

Hoover and the Farmer

Governor Smith's St. Paul speech puts all the farm leaders who are supporting Mr. Hoover in an untenable position. Mr. Hoover's plan of farm relief is far removed from that of the farmers themselves. He wants to make the tariff, which their experience discounts as an aid, the basis of farm relief. Nowhere has he said that he would have signed the McNary-Haugen bill had he been in the White House, nor can it be assumed that he will do so if he is elected

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT
By F. A. WALKER

GET "FIT"; KEEP "FIT"

THERE is a great deal being said these days on the interesting subject of getting "fit" and keeping "fit." We are told every little while how persons of note prepare themselves for their onerous duties, come breezily in their offices in the morning, settle themselves before their desks and without any apparent effort do a real man's job before the laggards get fairly in harness.

To the average young man or woman, the matter of getting "fit" and keeping "fit" is a more or less serious business.

It interferes with evening diversions, frivolous pleasures and silly social engagements, which in most cases are responsible for a very large percentage of the world's sorrows.

If you are observant as you loiter from play house to palatial restaurant, you will find that the men and women who are doing the really big things in life, are not to be seen in the gilded boxes or at the snowy-clothed tables.

They are at home, storing their minds with something useful or snoring peacefully in bed, getting natural sleep, resting, taking care of their bodies and conserving their energies for the work of the morrow.

They are getting "fit" and keeping "fit" in the correct way.

And you have only to look these men and women over in the morning to see that they are "fit" to grapple with any stubborn problem that may confront them, confident of mastery.

Their minds are as clear as a bell, their hands as firm as the roots of an oak.

How then, seeing these successful men and women becoming more successful each passing day, stronger and richer at the end of each year, can you take note of their achievements and accomplishments without practicing their virtues and imitating their examples?

They have learned how to get "fit" and keep "fit."

And the methods they have adopted are so simple that you can embrace them as your own, become strong where you are weak, capable where you are inefficient and qualified to shoulder similar responsibilities with the same ease.

Get "fit" and keep "fit," ought to be the motto for everybody.

"Wear a smile on your face,

Let your lips bubble over with song;
'Twill lighten your load

DID YOU EVER TRY THESE?

A MOST delightful salad and one which "will be enjoyed by all" is:

Rice Salad.

Cook three tablespoonfuls of rice in boiling salted water for ten minutes; drain and add one cupful of orange juice in a double boiler; cook until the rice is tender; cool, add one-half cupful of blanched and shredded almonds, sprinkle with salt, arrange on slices of pineapple with balls of cottage cheese. Serve with French dressing. This is a salad appropriate to serve with a duck dinner.

Onions Stuffed With Ham.

Peel eight good-sized onions, cover with boiling water and boil until nearly tender; drain, rinse in cold water and drain again. Cut out the center of each onion to leave a cup. Sprinkle the inside with salt and pepper. Take one cupful of cooked ham chopped, one cupful of breadcrumbs, salt, and teaspoonful of minced parsley, the onion taken from the centers, chopped. Fill the onions, adding butter to season. Place them in a pan, add cream and cook until the onions are tender, basting often. Just before serving sprinkle generously with buttered crumbs and brown in a hot oven

Vegetable Salad.

Arrange on a platter a mound of finely shredded lettuce and cucumber slices, moistened with mayonnaise to which a few capers have been added. Cover with grated carrot and surround with slices of hard-cooked egg against which stand a tiny tree of cauliflower.

Cabbage Imperial.

Fold back three or four leaves from a firm head of cabbage. With a sharp knife cut out the center, leaving a thick wall. Take one cupful of cold cooked meat, one cupful of thinly sliced tomatoes, one cupful of sliced carrots, and enough of the cabbage chopped to fill the head. Season well and tie up in a cloth and steam until the cabbage is tender. Serve on a chop plate cut into pie-shaped pieces.

Concordia Salad.

Mix together two parts of shredded Chinese cabbage and one part of diced pineapple, one part of orange pulp and one part of seeded grapes. Lay on blanched lettuce and served with mayonnaise.

Truth Was Something He Hadn't Thought Of

In France it is the custom to say, when speaking of a liar, "He lies like a dentist." In Russia it is less complicated; one says, "He lies like a moujik," for a Russian peasant does not know what the truth means.

During the first year of the World war a father who lived near Smolensk was complaining bitterly. A priest, who happened to be passing, inquired the reason for his sorrow.

"It is because of my son," said the peasant.

"Is he sick?"

"No, but I don't know what to do about him. If I make him younger the authorities will make me send him to school; and if I say he's older they will take him into the army."

"Then why don't you give his exact age?"

"That's a good idea," replied the moujik. "I never thought of that."

A POOL
By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

THE heart must be
 A crystal pool,
Through all life's turmoil
 Calm and cool,
The things around
 To know, to love,
And still reflect
 The things above.

No argosies
 Will plough its deep,
No passions o'er
 Its waters sweep,
No gilded ships
 Their pennons show,
But, oh, the peace
 The heart will know!

For I care more
 For peace than power,
And know no beauty
 Like a flower.
I thank the God
 Who made of me
Only a pool
 And not the sea.

Uncommon Sense
By John Blake

NOISY COURAGE

ONE of the interesting fictions which bad literature nourishes and supports is that a noisy, boisterous man is necessarily a coward.

The blustering bad man and the quiet, modest hero are two of the favorite characters of authors and readers of popular adventure stories. In the inevitable clash between these two characters the poor bad man never has a Chinaman's chance.

He is always proved an arrant coward. The quiet one, usually flicking a speck of dust from his coat, invariably emerges victorious from every encounter with his rival.

Everybody likes to think of an insolent, domineering bully getting his just deserts. If he gets them through an apparently weak, quiet little fellow, the picture is just that much more enjoyable.

Unfortunately, we cannot make a thing so merely by thinking of it. The things we imagine do not always exist in real life.

It is not always wise to assume that a loud-talking, boastful ruffian is a poltroon, pleasing as the thought may be. Any such assumption is quite likely to lead one into a very embarrassing situation.

* * * * * * *

O. Henry once said that when it came to a choice between tackling a swaggering bully and a quiet stranger he would pick on the latter every time.

Nobody ever proved that John L. Sullivan was a coward. Yet it was Sullivan's habit to bring his fist down on the table and emphatically declare that he could lick every so and so in the world.

It was felt at the time that he did not exaggerate very much. At least, few quiet strangers stepped noiselessly out of their obscure corners to prove that he was a liar.

It is, of course, a fact that fighting words do not make a fighting man.

* * * * * * *

Noise itself means little. The noisiest person may have far less ability than the person who does not broadcast his merits and abilities.

But neither does noise prove that a man lacks courage or ability.

In fact, some of our most successful citizens are those who have shouted their own praises the loudest.

I do not say that this is meritorious. It would probably become them better to be more modest when referring to themselves.

But modesty pays few dividends. The world usually takes a man at his own valuation—at least until it finds him out.

Insolence is often a mask for cowardice and boastfulness is often a mask for incompetence. But not always.

The domineering bully may be an obnoxious nuisance. But that does not make him a coward by several jumps.

So if you decide to mix it with him, be prepared for a real scrap. For it is about an even chance that you will find yourself engaged in one.

Touches that Add Style to Dresses
By MAE MARTIN

It's amazing to see how faded, out-of-style dresses can be transformed by a few buttons, a little braid and the quick magic of home dyeing or tinting. You don't need any experience to tint or dye successfully if you are sure to use true, fadeless Diamond Dyes. Tinting with them is easy as bluing, and dyeing takes just a little more time to "set" the colors. They never give things that re-dyed look which comes from using inferior dyes. Insist on Diamond Dyes and save disappointment. Over 20 million packages used a year.

My new 64-page illustrated book, "Color Craft," gives hundreds of money-saving hints for renewing clothes and draperies. It's Free. Write for it, now, to Mae Martin, Dept. G-143, Diamond Dyes, Burlington Vermont.

Past Turned to Account

A new profession has sprung up in France to meet popular demand, that of "rent agent for prehistoric deposits. These are agencies which have obtained options on fields suspected of hiding rich archeological deposits or prehistoric cemeteries and allow them to be worked at a fixed rental.

Cruel Words

"He says his last novel is his best."
"Well, I'm sure he couldn't do better than let it be his last."

When Food Sours

Lots of folks who think they have "indigestion" have only an acid condition which could be corrected in five or ten minutes. An effective anti-acid like Phillips Milk of Magnesia soon restores digestion to normal.

Phillips does away with all that sourness and gas right after meals. It prevents the distress so apt to occur two hours after eating. What a pleasant preparation to take! And how good it is for the system! Unlike a burning dose of soda—which is but temporary relief at best—Phillips Milk of Magnesia neutralizes many times its volume in acid.

Next time a hearty meal, or too rich a diet has brought on the least discomfort, try—

Can You Find the Twins?

No, they are not all twins! Two and only two are identical, and are the Twins you are asked to find. Can you? To be sure, the 18 pictures all look alike; but look closer. How about their hats? There are other differences, too. Read the clues. Only two girls are exact duplicates. They are the Twins—can you find them?

. . . CLUES . . .

At first glance all of the pictures look alike. But upon closer examination you will see that almost every one differs in some way from all the others. In some you will find a difference in their wearing apparel. Have they all ear-rings or necklaces? How about their coats and hats? Are they trimmed the same? Some have bands on the brim and crowns; others have not. Maybe the difference is just the buttonhole in the lapel of the coat.

The Wrath of a Boss

On October 17, 1913, by a vote of 43 to 12, the Court of Impeachment voted to remove William Sulzer from the office of governor of the State of New York. It was the first time in the history of the state that a governor has ever been impeached, and its most powerful lesson was the power of a Tammany Boss's wrath.—M. R. Werner in Tammany Hall.

Women Are Partners

More than ten million women march to work every morning side by side with the men. Steadily the importance of women is gaining not only in the routine tasks of industry, but in executive responsibility. I include also the woman who stays at home as the guardian of the welfare of the family. She is a partner in the job and the wages.—HERBERT HOOVER in his Newark speech.

Jos. J. Baxter and Hobart Wiseman attended the homecoming exercises at the Bellingham normal school.

Miss Lorna Middleton, who is attending business college in Seattle, spent the week end in town with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Middleton.

—Royal Bakery Special for Saturday: Cream Puffs, three for 25 cents. Filled with real whipped cream. They are delicious—try them.

Miss Susie Ryan, who is employed at the local telephone exchange, returned Sunday from a few days' visit with friends in Seattle.

Mr. and Mrs. John Kosa returned too their home in Index the first of the week, after a visit at the home of Mrs. Kosa's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Owen.

The Orchard Watchman

Tammany Hall has been the watchman of that orchard, the city treasury, more often than any other organization, and greedy as well as immature men have usually been assigned to its outposts.

Big John Kennedy told his protege: "A man who can take care of himself with his hands, an' who never lets whiskey fool him or steal his head can go far in this game of politics. An' it's a pretty good game at that, is politics, and can be brought to pay like a bank."—M. R. Werner in Tammany Hall.

Hitchcock Lauds Hoover

Senator Hitchcock (Dem., of Nebraska, Administration leader in the Senate, quoted in Herbert Hoover's behalf in the Senate January 23, 1919, said then:

"I know something of the struggle Mr. Hoover has had with the packing combines in the United States, and I want to say that if there had not been a Hoover and a Food Administration, the packers would have made a great deal more than they did make. Mr. Hoover has been vindicated. He came out of the war, I believe, with a better reputation than any other public official."

Hoover's Record

Both from its humane and practical side the work which Mr. Hoover has done appeals to thinking men and women. Hoover has successfully handled problems which would have baffled most men. His record is unsurpassed.—Williamsport (Pa.) Gazette Bulletin.

Hooverizing Statute Books

Hoover induced paving brick manufacturers to reduce standard sizes from sixty-six to five; eliminated seventy or seventy-four sizes of beds it would make a lawyer shudder to think what he might do with the statute books.

Hoover Saved 20,000,000

"How many lives have the Hoover organizations saved since the armistice?" I asked a European who knows. "Ten million at a minimum," he replied. "But if you said twenty million, you'd probably stand within the truth."—Will Irwin.

Marse Henry's Idea

Colenel Henry Watterson wrote an editorial in his newspaper, the Louisville Courier Journal, in which he remarked that the observant and thoughtful onlookers had long been of the opinion that "the people of New York are incapable of self-government."—M. R. Werner in Tammany Hall.

Tammany Gets Millions

"If Tammany could be incorporated and all its earnings, both legitimate and illegitimate, could be gathered up and paid over in dividends, the stockholders would get more than the New York Central bond and stockholders and more than the Standar Oil stockholders."—Lincoln Steffens.

Vote For A. SCOTT BULLITT For Governor

In the interests of Good Government, Good Citizenship and clean politics we urge all voters of whatever party or faith to unite with us on November 6th, in electing Scott Bullitt, Democratic candidate for Governor, and ending for all time the strife and turmoil of the past four years at Olympia.

Concrete and the upper Skagit valley is interested particularly in a project for a State Park near Rockport. Bickering and quarreling at Olympia resulted in the Governor vetoing an appropriation of $240,000 from the accumulated Drivers License funds for the use of the State Park Board, because of his unreasonable dislike of Messrs. Hinkle, Savidge and Potts, who compose the Board. Two of these same men will again be on the park Board and governor Hartley will, no doubt, again veto any appropriation made for State Parks by the legislature. In their visit to Concrete last summer Mr. Savidge and Mr. Hinkle promised their cooperation in saving this Rockport tract as a State Park as soon as funds were available.

Mr. Bullitt has promised to cooperate with other State officials, as proven by the following statement made by him in his campaign:

"I favor full and cordial cooperation by the Governor of the State with the other state officials. If elected Governor, I intend to consult and cooperate with the other officials elected by the people of the State, regardless of their political affiliations, to the end that we may restore peace, progress and efficiency in the affairs of the State.

"Immediately after election, I intend to call a conference with the State officials and members of he legislature of all parties, for the purpose of discussing proposed legislation and getting their suggestions as to matters to be brought to the attention of the legislature in the Governor's message. The adminisration of governor Lister proved conclusively that a Governor can work efficiently with officials of another political party and both can cooperate for the best interests of the State"

What Governor Rogers and Governor Lister did, Mr. Bullitt will do in the interest of harmonious and efficient State Government. Vote for him and banish Hartleyism for ever from the State.

DEMOCRATIC BULLITT FOR GOVERNOR CLUB

GRASMERE

Mrs. Ernest Harding, who has been visiting with her mother, Mrs. McKinney, for the past month, returned to her home in Montana this week.

Quite a number of the Grasmere people went to Hamilton Wednesday evening to take in the dance.

Mrs. Leonard R. Everett and Miss Ruth Everett were shopping and calling on friends in Bellingham Tuesday.

Miss Josephne Weaver, who is attending the Junior College in Mount Vernon, spent the four-day vacation last week at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ben N. Weaver.

The Grasmere school is giving an old-fashioned box social on next Saturday evening, November 3. The proceeds of the entertainment will be used toward furnishing the gymnasium building. A good time is promised for all who come, and a large crowd is expected.

Mrs. A. Fred Carlson and Mrs. Leonard Everett were shopping in Sedro-Woolley Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Guy Rowland were visiting with home folks in Sedro-Woolley Wednesday evening.

Betty Minkler of Sedro-Woolley was visiting her cousin, Adrienne Thompson, over the week end.

There were a number of the usual Hallowe'en pranks played in this neighborhood yesterday evening, but no serious damage was done.

Mrs. Joseph Fessler was a dinner guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Thompson Saturday.

L. R. Everett made a trip to Newhalem Sunday to look after some business matters.

Mr. and Mrs. Hichard Thompson and daughter Adrienne were guests at the Minkler home in Sedro-Woolley over Sunday.

Edwin Arnold, who underwent an operation for appendicitis in the Everett hospital some time ago, is reported to be steadily improving, but is not able to return home yet.

The Turn of The Tide

Thus far Governor Smith has been campaigning in the States where he is least well known and therefore in territory where the underground propaganda has been most effective. His success has been amazing. No competent observer can have any doubt that the contrast between Mr. Hoover's silences, evasions and irrelevances, on the one hand, and Governor Smith's plain speaking, on the other, has made a profound impression on the voters, declares the New York World.

Everywhere the question is being asked: What keeps Herbert Hoover from speaking his mind? Why can't he say what he thinks about water power, farm relief, prohibition? Why does he have to make a fake issue out of the tariff? Why do his spellbinders have to misrepresent Governor Smith's position on immigration? Why, when every intelligent business man knows it is absurd, does Mr. Hoover, who eight years ago appealed for a Democratic Congress, now pretend to belief that the Republicans have a patent on prosperity? In less than a month of campaigning Governor Smith has unsettled, exposed and discredited the Republican campaign strategy. He has already reversed the whole trend of opinion in the South and West.

The Republicans, who thought that the South would change its allegiance to the Democratic Party at the behest of Southern bigots and fanatics, must know by this time that Bishop Cannon, Dr. Straton and Mrs. Willebrandt have failed. Southern leaders know better than any one else that to turn over their States to the so-called Hoover Democrats is to surrender to the worst elements in their communities. The border States from West Virginia to Oklahoma are fighting-ground; the bigots and fanatics have done their worst, and the liberals are on the offensive. In the West, from Wisconsin to Colorado, the whole Progressive vote, which followed Roosevelt, Wilson and La Follette, has been moving steadily toward Smith since the Omaha speech.

The Republicans know all this quite well, and in the last ten days they have done their best to conceal the greatness of the tide toward Smith by a propaganda of defeatism among the band-wagon voters.

For an historical parallel it is necessary to go back to the victory of Andrew Jackson in 1332 and of Abraham Lincoln in 1860. For today, as in those two epochal campaigns, a multitude of American voters, hitherto disregarded by the party in power, have found a champion and a program. No dopester studying the figures of 1924 and 1920 can possibly calculate the consequences of the uprising in the West and in the East of millions of silent voters whom the Republican Party has treated as second-class citizens.

All that anybody can say is that the tide has turned toward Smith, and that with courage, intelligence and candor the victory can be won.

New Speed-Invention

for Ironing— that's Portable

That Heats in 4 Minutes

WOMEN—here is a sensational new invention for ironing. Small, compact—easy to carry around—slips into a kitchen drawer or closet when not in use. Yet it does all that the big, costly machines will do. It operates from the wringer shaft of your Thor Washing Machine — faster than anything you've seen before. It irons the loads of flat work, that make up some 90% of the family ironing, in less than one-third the time required by hand.

Don't iron by hand another day. At this amazing low price —you can't afford to be without the greatest of all women's labor-savers in the home.

Hoover's Americanism

Mr. Hoover not only is American in every fiber, but he is one of those who knows and can tell why he is an American. Any whose conceptions of partisanship tempt them to question his mental status reasonably may be asked to look into their own minds and see if they are equally prepared to tell why they are Americans.—Buffalo News.

Every purchaser of a new Ford is entitled to Free Inspection Service for the first 1500 miles

THE modern automobile is a finely built piece of machinery and it will stand a lot of abuse. Considering the work it does, it gives surprisingly little trouble. But there isn't a car made that will not run better and longer if given proper care.

The first few hundred miles are especially important because that is when the mechanism of your car is being broken in.

Proper attention during this period will lengthen its life and prevent unnecessary trouble later on.

We are particularly interested in this matter because we believe it is our duty not only to make a good automobile, but to help the owner get the greatest possible use over the longest period of time at a minimum of trouble and expense.

With this in view, the entire Ford dealer organization has been specially trained and equipped to service the new Model A car.

Furthermore, we have instructed every Ford dealer to give the following Free Inspection Service at 500, 1000 and 1500 miles:

Check battery
Check generator charging rate
Check distributor adjustment
Check carburetor adjustment
Check lights
Check brakes
Check shock absorber adjustment
Check tire inflation
Check steering gear
Change engine oil
Lubricate chassis

No charge is made for labor or materials incidental to this service, except, of course, where repairs are necessary through accident, misuse or neglect. The only charge is for new oil.

See your Ford dealer, therefore, and get this Free Inspection of your new car at 500, 1000 and 1500 miles. Find out, too, how little it will cost to have your car given a thorough going-over at regular periods thereafter.

A checking-up by experienced mechanics, together with oiling and greasing every 500 miles, will add months and years to the life of your car and mean more economical and pleasurable motoring every mile you drive.

DINSMORE'S FOLLY

SYNOPSIS

That her grandfather left her the architectural monstrosity known as "Dinsmore's Folly" is, for esthetic reasons, by no means pleasing to Ethel Dinsmore, modern "flapper." She would refuse the bequest, but her father will not allow it. Edith visits the place. Perkins, the caretaker, is the victim of a matrimonial mishap, his wife having left him. Fred James, newspaper reporter, comes. Mr. Paul, Dinsmore's right-handed man, proposes to Edith and is rejected. He takes the rejection in a melodramatic manner. Edith sees a connection between Perkins' runaway wife and Mr. Paul. Riding with Fred James, Edith's horse bolts. The runaway is stopped by a stranger who does not give his name. Edith hereafter calls him M. P. (My Preserver). With her sister, Josephine, and Fred James, Edith attends a prize fight. Police raid the place. The girl is saved from the indignity of arrest by the same man who had stopped her runaway horse. She learns his name is Braxton, and allows him to think she is a poor relation of the Dinsmores. Telling her father she is in love with Fred James, the old gentleman arranges for Josephine and Edith to take a trip to Japan, with their Aunt Candice. On the pier, as the ship is about to sail, the girls hear newsboys calling "All About the Dinsmore Indictment." Excited, they allow the vessel to sail without them, but with Aunt Candice.

My first idea, of course, was to go to Father's office. But on the way I changed my mind. We wouldn't find Father there, of course; and we would finds shoals of reporters who would probably make a headline of us: "Darling daughters dart to the defense of their dad," or something of that sort, that would make Father mad. Father hated the newspapers, except when he wanted to use them. All we could do at the office would be to find out where Father had been taken; and we could, or so I thought, find that out just as well over the telephone. So I leaned forward and told the chauffeur to take us home.

Josephine looked up at this. Along about Thirty-fourth street she begun to sniffle softly behind her veil, and I though she had ceased to pay attention to anything. But my changing the orders roused her.

"Aren't we going to the j-jail?" she asked.

"The jail? Of course not," I exclaimed. "Why, Josephine Dinsmore! You know perfectly well that Father wouldn't stand for our coming to the jail. I never dreamed of going there. Besides, we don't know where the jail is—"

Josephine glanced around. "Can't we ask somebody?" she faltered. "The chauffeur looks as if he ought to know—"

"Ssh. Don't let him hear. Do you want to get into Town Tattle? Besides, it doesn't matter. It would never do for us to go to jail. I did mean to go to the office, but I've thought t over, and I'm sure we'd better go home and telephone from there."

Josephine considered this for a moment. Then she brightened. We can send Father a bundle of underclothes and things and—"

I bit my lips to keep from screaming. "Underclothes!" I gasped. "Underclothes. You talk of underclothes at a time like this. You—Stop the car—quick." I leaned forward and caught the chauffeur's arm. "We want to get out here."

Of course I oughtn't to have caught his arm! I know that perfectly well. But I wanted to get out and I didn t have time to think up any other way to stop him. And he needn't have gotten so mad. He didn't run into anybody. He came near it, of course; but a miss is as good as a mile. I don't think our chauffeur could have been very brave, for he turned quite white and didn't speak for a minute—not till he had brought the car up to the curb.

"Get out!" he grated.

"What?"

"Get out! You wanted to get out, didn't you? Well, then, get! And thank your stars you don't have to be carried."

"You—you—you—" I sputtered. I was so mad I couldn't talk. So I got instead.

Josephine followed more slowly. She handed the man a banknote. "I'm sorry," she said.

The man took the money. "Thank you, miss," he said. "No harm done after all. But if you'll excuse me saying so, you'd bettter keep an eye on the other young lady, Miss." He started before I could find my voice. And he didn't give Josephine any change.

Josephine seemed to understand how I felt, for she caught my arm hurriedly. "We came very fast, didn't we?" she asked. "But why did you stop a block from home, Edie?"

The question brought me back to earth. "Good gracious!" I exclaimed. Can't you see? . . . Look?" I pointed.

A block away, in front of our house, the street was black with people. "Our dear neighbors have read the papers," I went on, "and have come to stare I knew they would. Maybe we can get in without being noticed—much We couldn't have if we'd arrived in a taxi."

Josephine looked at me, admiringly, I thought. "I never would have thought of that!" she murmured.

We were close to the house now and could see the people who were waiting. They did not look like neighbors, unless neighbors include everybody in New York. They seemed angry, too. I dropped my veil and motioned to Josephine to do the same. "I don't know one of them," I whispered. "But some of them may know us."

Decidedly, the waiting people were argry—very angry. They were humming like bees. I could not understand it at first. "What the matter?" I asked a woman in a shawl who stood waiting.

She glared at me.

"What's the matter?" she echoed. "What's the matter, is it? It's ruin and destruction, that's the matter, so it is. That thafe of the world Dinsmore has stolen every cent I had laid up for me old age, that's what's the matter."

"Mr. Dinsmore? Stolen? It's not true," I gasped.

"Not true, is it? It's me that wishes to God it wasn't true! He's stolen all me savings and run away with them." She thrust a newspaper beneath my nose.

It was another and apparently a later paper than the one I had bought on the steamer. That had been chiefly headlines and text that repeated the headlines; this I saw at a glance contained columns of detail. I snatched it from the woman's hands and 'ran my eye down it.

It was awful. The paper seemed to have thrown restraint to the winds. According to it, Father had done everything—wrecked railroads, robbed banks, gambled in stocks, ruined thousands of widows and children—and had then disappeared. But he would be found soon; the railroads and ferries were all watched and—

I read no more. At least Father wasn't in jail. I turned on the woman. "I don't believe a word of it," I cried. "Father—"

Josephine clutched my arm abruptly and I stopped. It was the first time in all her life that Josephine had done anything abruptly; and I stopped and turned to see what was the matter. I thought that perhaps she had seen Father approaching. I couldn't imagine her clutching me for any less startling cause.

"What's the matter?" I gasped.

Josephine hesitated. "Don't you think— Don't you think—" she began. "That—that—"

I didn't know what she meant. But the woman was speaking and I turned back to her. "Father—" I began again.

But she did not allow me to finish. "An' what does your father know?" she broke in. "It is himself that knows more than the grand jury that indicted Dinsmore? It is himself that knows where Dinsmore got the money to build the foine house yonder all for himself and his two daughters? The hussies! It's tearing their clothes off'n their backs I'd like to be, so I would. I'd—"

"You—you," I spluttered. And again Josephine clutched my arm.

I knew what she meant now, but was too furious to listen. No one could call Father names in my presence without my speaking up. "You—you—" I raved. "You—"

"Whist!" The Irishwoman turned away. "Yonder they come. An' I hope they've got him." She turned toward the house.

My eyes followed hers, and for the first time that morning I really looked at the house. Then I gasped. I scarcely recognized it. The upper windows were all blanked by blinds that were pulled down to the very bottom; and the lower windows and the door were hidden behind the flat wooden frames that we always put up when we went away from town in the summer. Father had said nothing about putting them up; he had let us think that he was going to live at home while we were gone. And he must have set the servants to work on them as soon as we started for the boat.

But at the moment I had no time to think of that. The small door in the big entrance frame was open and through it three men were coming. Two were policemen, and one was—was—Thank Heaven, it wasn't Father! It was Harker, the caretaker who always lived in the house while we were away. He peered out and then dodged back and closed the door.

The two policemen came down to the pavement and to the patrol wagon that was waiting at the curb. As the second one climbed in he turned and spoke to a man who questioned him.

"Naw!" he said gruffly. "There won't be nothin' doin'. Dinsmore ain't here; and it's a safe bet he won't be. His daughters have sailed for somewhere; and there's nobody here but a caretaker. There's no use waitin'."

He spoke to the one man, but his big voice boomed over the street so that everybody heard it. Then he jumped into the wagon and it clattered away.

The crowd seemed satisfied, for it began to disperse, drifting away by ones and twos till no one was left except Josephine and me and an officer, whom I had not noticed before, who stood watching at the corner of the alley just beyond the house. As soon as I saw him I guessed that he had been stationed there to arrest or follow anybody who came to the house, and I made up my mind that he should not see Josephine or me. If the papers and the police thought that Josephine and I had sailed for Japan I would not undeceive them. We could hide and wait till Father turned up. Perhaps I—even I—could do something toward clearing away the cloud that rested on Father's name.

I turned to Josephine. "Come!" I said, turning away from the house.

Josephine stared at me. "Come where?" she asked. "Aren't you going home?"

"No!" I said. "We can't." I explained why we couldn't. "We can't go home. We've got to go to Dinsmore's Folly."

Josephine looked so amazed that I did not wait for her to speak. "I don't wonder you're surprised," I said. "But we've got to go there. We've nowhere else to go. Perhaps you've forgotten"—I had forgotten, too, and the fact made me a little sarcastic—"perhaps you have forgotten that Aunt Candice carried the money and that you and I are nearly busted—unless we go to the office and give ourselves dead away."

Josephine considered this for a moment. "Then," she said, "we can't afford to take a taxi out to Dinsmore."

"That's nothing." I wasn't going to admit that I had forgotten anything. "We don't need any taxi. We'll go in the subway. Come on."

I started and Josephine followed. For three blocks she followed in silence. Then just at the subway entrance she halted. "I've been thinking," she began.

I stopped and faced her. I had great respect for the result of Josephine's thoughts—when she reached them. She was slow but she was sure—often painfully so. "Well?" I questioned.

Josephine opened her big eyes wider. "I believe Father is on board the steamer," she said. "I believe that was why he sent us on her. I believe he expected to meet us on her after she got to sea."

"Good Lord!" My eyes popped wide and my mouth fell open. "If—" But there was no time for "ifs" just them. "Come along," I cried, clutching Josephine's arm. "We'll talk all that over at Dinsmore."

CHAPTER V

"Oh! h—l," said the duchess, who till then had taken no part in the conversation.

Fred says that any story that is a story ought to start with some such expression as the above. I couldn't work anything of the kind in at the beginning of this story. But—if not at the beginning of a story, why not at the beginning of a chapter?

Not that there is any duchess in this chapter or even in this story. But the state of mind that the quotation connotes certainly does portray the feelings of pretty nearly everybody that appears in this chapter and of a lot of people who do not appear. At least, it portrays their feelings a little later when they heard of the events that took place in this chapter. And if eventually, why not now?

Anyway, it goes double for me!

Josephine and I started for Dinsmore's Folly on the subway; anon we took a trolley car; some more anon we walked; and finally we arrived, after traveling for two hours without stopping, except for ten minutes that Josephine insisted on spending in a drug store at the end of the subway, while I stood beside a trolley car and begged the conductor not to start till my sister could join me. The conductor wouldn't promise, but he did wait. And then, after Josephine had come, he waited for a good five minutes longer. Brute!

Motto All Right, but Staff Went Too Far

Samuel Grindstone was a hustler of the modern school. He believed in the gospel of speeding up.

Over every desk in his office he placed a large printed notice, reading: "Do It Now!"

But a week later, with fired fingers and exhausted air, he tore them all down.

"Hello," said a friend, dashing in and seeing the ceremony of destruction. "What's up? Doesn't hustling pay? Going back to the old leisurely methods?"

"Yes, I am," snorted Grindstone "Hustling doesn't pay. I gave ten cents each for these notices, thinking they'd spur my staff to hard work."

"Well?"

"Well the net result is that they've all acted on the motto The chief cashier has bolted with the contents of the safe, my typist has eloped with my youngest son, four juniors came in yesterday to ask for a raise, and the office boy got a better job and has gone off to it."

Earliest Newspapers

It is hard to say just when newspapers began, for the first papers, or pamphlets, publishing news did not appear with any regularity. They appeared when there was something important to tell. For instance, there was a French pamphlet published in 1402 telling of the surrender of Granada by the Moors to Ferdinand and Isabella Possibly there was another edition when Columbus discovered America, but no record has been found of that.

Ancient Pistol

H. M. Raab, of Dallastown, Pa., collector of old horse pistols manufactured in the United States, recently came into possession of a weapon which was manufactured in Virginia in 1805. The weapon is said to be the oldest of its type in existence, as the oldest previous date for the style was 1865.

Dorothy's Mother Proves Claim

Children don't ordinarily take to medicines but here's one that all of them love. Perhaps it shouldn't be called a medicine at all. It's more like a rich, concentrated food. It's pure, wholesome, sweet to the taste and sweet in your child's little stomach. It builds up and strengthens weak, puny, underweight children, makes them eat heartily, brings the roses back to their cheeks, makes them playful, energetic, full of life. And no bilious, headachy, constipated, feverish, fretful baby or child ever failed to respond to the gentle influence of California Fig Syrup on their little bowels. It starts lazy bowels quick, cleans them out thoroughly, tones and strengthens them so they continue to act normally, of their own accord.

Millions of mothers know about California Fig Syrup from experience. A Western mother, Mrs. J. G. Moore, 119 Cliff Ave., San Antonio, Texas, says: "California Fig Syrup is certainly all that's claimed for it. I have proved that with my little Dorothy. She was a bottle baby and very delicate. Her bowels were weak. I started her on Fig Syrup when she was a few months old and it regulated her, quick. I have used it with her ever since for colds and every little set-back and her wonderful condition tells better than words how it helps."

Don't be imposed on. See that the Fig Syrup you buy bears the name, "California" so you'll get the genuine, famous for 50 years.

Immense Monolith

The largest marble monolith in the world, standing sixty-five feet high, measuring eighteen feet across and weighing forty tons, has been extracted from the famous marble quarries at Cararra, and will be presented to Mussolini for the new Fascist stadium to be erected at the Farnesina outside of Rome.

Pathetic Faithfulness

A setter dog that refused to leave a canine pal in death caused motorists at Beaumont, Texas, to send a hurry call to police headquarters. The dog was sitting beside the body of his stricken comrade in the center of the highway, defying drivers to run him down as they had the other dog. One automobile had been thrown into the ditch to avoid hitting the setter. It was not until the dead dog had been moved to the side of the road that the other permitted traffic to move normally.

Forewarned

"This is a cynical age," declared George Bernard Shaw, "and it all comes from the young people knowing too much. I was strolling through the lobby of the Carleton the other day when I heard a debutante say: "'Erwin says that I am the handsomest and cleverest girl he has ever known.'

"To which her friend replied: 'My dear, you should never marry a man who deceives you during your engagement.'"

Undecided

"So you call your canary Joe? Does it stand for Joseph or Josephine?"

"We don't know. That's why we call it Joe."—London Opinion.

Youth and Age in Legion

The oldest and youngest members of the American Legion live at Miami, Fla. They are John W. Boucher, eighty-four, and George E. Mackenzie, twenty-three. Boucher served in the construction forces of the A. E. F. in France, getting into the Pershing army when he was seventy-three years old. Mackenzie ran away from home to enlist when scarcely thirteen.
