THIS & THAT

By H. L. D.

The big Fourth of July weekend is over and all the weathermen have been a mite off in their predictions because we had as lovely a three days as anyone with his heart on a few days in the great outdoors could wish. The upper valley was crowded with campers as the great migration got under way. Canadians came to the states, Washingtonians traveled up to Canada, people from the valley headed for salt water and those used to that stuff came up in droves to our mountains and streams. A drive up to Diablo Monday proved that the area was very pouplar, and we hear Baker Lake got an unusually heavy play as the weekenders explored the new aspects of that popular playground and fishing spot.

A new bedroom with a window wall about twenty feet long on the sunny side of the apartment has caused us to change our hours of sleep—or shorten them by about two or three. The first ray of sun slips in and finds our closed eyelids and that is about the end of rest. So we were up and sitting in our front window as the first of the "tourists" started through the town—in both directions—on Saturday morning. Boats, trailers, station wagons filled with camping equipment and kids; cars with skiis on top and truck campers rolled one after another up and down the Main street. Many stopped and tried the doors of the stores hoping to pick up that forgotten something-or-other but Concrete's main drag was a dismal, dirty looking place, tightly locked up except for the eating establishments. They seemed to be doing a pretty good business.

The thought came that with business and employment at a rather low ebb this year, perhaps we had better start to count on our tourist trade and try to cater to it a little. It is growing mightily and with the North Cross-State highway slowly getting its start perhaps this would be the time to learn the rudiments of the business and let our own people get in on the ground floor, instead of waiting until the public demands service and outsiders pour in to give it to them.

Being under a rather heavy schedule at the moment, our only celebration of the long weekend was a picnic at Lake Goodwin on Sunday. Art and Ann and the children met my mother, Mrs. Nora McClean of Anacortes, and Chuck and I down there and we spent the day with them. It was a shock to see the great numbers of people crowding Wenberg State Park until each group was lucky to have space to lay a blanket or snatch a table long enough to eat! My sister once lived right across the road from the lake not too long ago and while it was popular, we had no idea it would be so crowded.

Truly we have become "hill people" and small town, liking the feeling of not being crowded or pushed by humanity. We give our thanks for the "under-development" of our valley, the great size of our natural playgrounds that make man seem small and insignificant. With the upsurge in population the time will come when the valley will be as heavily populated as the district around Seattle and Everett. There will be much more employment and people will have steadier and higher wages, business will prosper and the valley will become wealthy—but something precious will be gone, never to return. We'd just as soon it didn't come in our time

Judith Ann, our eldest granddaughter, arrived Wednesday to visit with us for a few days while her sister, Jill Marie, is visting at the Don King home in Anacortes

Surprise! A Baby Boy For Johnny Smiths

There have been surprise parties, surprise showers and just plain surprises, but Johnny Smith was given the biggest surprise of all last Wednesday night when his wife honored him with a surprise baby!

The event, entirely unexpected, came so quickly that John had to assist his wife with the delivery of a fine 6 lb. 5½ oz. baby son. The nurse and a trip to the hospital completed the event with no complications. John came through the ordeal badly shaken, but bouyed up by the fact that he now has a son, Troy Lee, to fill out the present Smith roster of two girls, Aja and Tammy.

Grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. John Smith of Sedro-Woolley and Mr. and Mrs. Troy Robertson of this city. John is secretary of the local Eagles lodge; wife, Marlene, works for Peterson's as bookkeeper and was back on the job by the weekend.

Hot Weather Fun Over; Fire Threat

After a burst of summer weather that gave the valley the best 4th of July weekend in some years, the residents are now beginning to get down to the practical facts of continued sunshine. A sharp drop in humidity Tuesday forced the Forest Service and State Forestry Departments to put the loggers on the early morning "hoot-owl" shift to lessen fire danger. Official high for Tuesday was 87 degrees.

The Forest Service has had an air patrol out of Bellingham every day during the past week over most of the forest.

Lookouts in the Baker River district are Jack Savage on Dillard Point; William Rainey on Sauk; and Michael Engle on Finney Peak. Fire crews are on alert and ready to go at the first sign of smoke.

Happily there was no trouble over the holiday weekend, although the upper Baker and Skagit valley had the largest crowd of campers and picnickers in years.

Huscusson - Spargo Wedding Friday Eve

This Friday evening, July 8th, is the date set for the wedding of Miss Ozell Huscusson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Huscusson of Marblemount, and James Spargo, son of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Spargo of this city. The ceremony is to be performed in the Community Bible Church with Rev. Guy Morris reading the wedding service

The wedding will be at 8:00 P. M. with a reception following. The young couple have issued an open invitation to all their friends in the valley to attend.

Marriage licenses of interest to residents of the upper valley the past week were those for Elvin T. Jordan, 37 and Beryl M. Coonc, legal, of Sedro-Woolley; and Reginald W. Hunter, 25, and Lucella N. Williams, 20 of Concrete.

Rockport Ferry Goes To Bottom

Troubles beset the old Rockport ferry last week and the need for a bridge became even more apparent as ferry service was disrupted several days from two separate accidents.

On Friday a log truck pulled on the ferry at the south landing and was a bit out of position for balance when the ferry swung into the current. The result was that the ferry tipped, swung around and sank a short distance from the shore. The ferryman, truck driver and some kids on the ferry managed to get ashore in the rowboat without difficulty.

The ferry, as seen in the above photo, came to rest with the top of the ferry cabin and the cab of the truck just out of water.

The ferry was hauled back to shore, pumped out and put into service Saturday, when disaster hit again. This time the scow swung in the current and the cables tore the motor mechanism from the side of the scow.

While the county crews were fishing the motor from the bottom of the river, South Rockport residents had to use rowboats to cross the river or drive all the way around by way of the Sauk river and Dalles bridges.

Novel Carries Upper Skagit Description

Word of the upper valley gets around. In a book club edition in which one novel is "Trustee of the Toolroom" by Nevil Shute, a part of the story concerns a very rich Tacoma lumberman, whose secretary had formerly worked in a mill at Marblemount on the Skagit river and became so efficient that she eventually almost managed the plant. She was hired away from plant.

In another part the lumberman and the hero of the piece flew by helicopter to a spot in the Cascades that almost fits the description of Darrington. There the fictional timber baron owned a big mill.

The late Mr. Shute was a Briton, but used this section of the country as incidental locale for several of his books, including "On The Beach," the bomb destruction story.

City Light Named In $350,000 Death Suit

City Light will be defendant in a $350,000 suit over the death of Guy Epperly, 37 year old construction worker, who was struck by a broken cable while at work for Merritt-Chapman & Scott on the Gorge dam April 4th.

Epperly was killed when a cable belonging to City Light snapped under strain and knocked Epperly through a wooden railing and 100 feet to the cement floor below. The claimant charges that the cable was in a worn and dangerous condition.

The claim was filed by the attorney for Mrs. Epperly.

Louise Parker Wedded To Gene Nieshe, June 19

Miss Louise Parker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Parker of Diablo and Gene Nieshe, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Nieshe of Birdsview, were united in marriage at a pretty ceremony at the Community Bible church in this city on June 19th. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Guy Morris.

The church was decorated in roses for the simple ceremony. The bride, given in marriage by her father, was gowned in white chiffon over taffeta and wore a finger-tipped veil held by a tiara of rhinestones. Her attendants, Miss Janet Power, Miss Helen Powers and Miss Janet Barnett, were dressed in gowns of pale pink and green.

Robert Daves attended the groom and ushers were Roger Hill and Bill Nieshe.

A reception was held in the basement of the church following the ceremony. A three tiered cake decorated with pink rosebuds and topped by the traditional bride and groom, coffee and punch was served to the relatives and friends attending.

The bride is a senior student at Concrete high school and has lived at Diablo for two years. The groom is employed at Marblemount, but they will make their future home in this city.

July Council Session Fast

The Fourth of July holiday was too close for serious work of the town council this week, so the Tuesday night session was confined to routine payment of bills and brief discussions of current business.

In reading the list of bills to be paid, Mrs. Alice Leonard, clerk, explained each one to the new council members, stating the fund each was charged to, which were regular monthly payments and which were special purchases.

Mayor Lowell Peterson reported he had been able to pick up some surplus hose that could be used to replace the worn out hose now being used by the street department for washing streets.

Ken Sullivan reported that he was making arrangements to cooperate with the county in some dust oiling on Superior avenue and that it was to be done this week.

Mrs. Leonard presented an offer of the Royal Neighbors Lodge to furnish a good used kitchen range for the Library Club Room kitchen in exchange for use of the hall for one afternoon a month for a year. The council considered the bargain well worth accepting so instructed her to credit the lodge with 12 meetings paid in full.

The club rooms have now been completely renovated, painted and improved with exception of wiring yet to be done. The range will again make it possible to use the kitchen facilities.

Mayor Peterson also reported on a recent meeting of county and city officials in regard to setting up a new system of handling Justice Court cases. He said that they had agreed to a proposal of three Justice for the county, which is to be arranged in three districts.

He said that Police Judge Ted Boyd has asked to be relieved of his duties in the near future, and a new judge would have to be selected. When the new Justice plan goes into effect, it may be possible to have a Justice of the Peace in this city, and that the same man could handle Police Court cases.

In the meantime, any volunteers for Police Judge at a regular salary of $30 a month?

Gate Opened For Fall Flock Of Candidates

Filings for political offices opened Tuesday morning and the first man to file for county office was Joel Gillette, Republican candidate for re-election as county assessor. Second in line was Joy Busha, incumbent Democratic county commissioner.

The commissioner's races in the first and second district seem to be set for hot competition. Paul Luvera, Republican, has filed for the first commissioner district race and John Ball of Fredonia has tossed his name in the ring for the Republican candidacy for the second commissioner district post.

Filings will close July 15th for the Sept. 13 primaries.

This also brings the reminder that registration books will close for the primary on Saturday, August 13th. Mrs. Alice Leonard is registration clerk for the Concrete area precincts. She is at City Hall on Thursday afternoons, or can be reached at her home for special appointment for registering a group at other times.

254,000 Steelhead Planted In Barnaby Slough

If everything goes according to plan, the Skagit river will become the best steelhead stream in the world. The plan belongs to the State Game Department, who are now starting the process of raising steelhead in their 27-acre rearing pond across the river at Rockport in what is known as "Barnaby's Slough." The slough is stream fed with good water and has been cleared, diked and equipped with a releasing trap for permitting the mature fish to migrate naturally into the Skagit river.

July 23rd the department, with State Game Protector Don Gibson as overseer, completed planting of 254,000 steelhead fry in the ponds at Barnaby. This amount of fish took four truck loads from the South Tacoma hatchery over a two day period. All fish seemed to survive the trip well under a tranquilizing drug and were lively and sound when released into the open waters.

A caretaker watches the rearing ponds on a 24-hour basis, keeping the predatory birds at a minimum and periodically feeding the small fish. They will be fed up until time for their release into the river. On their return from their cycle of migration, they will return to the ponds, where they will be trapped and the eggs taken for other hatches to be planted in the future.

In addition to the Barnaby fish plant, a summer run will be started from Lake Shannon. The first plant of summer-run steelhead was of 60,000 fry. Another 100,000 will be planted in hopes of assuring a continuing steelhead run from this spawning area.

Fish trap will be used to release steelhead to river and take eggs on return from migration

Note to present councilmen: It takes a stubborn man to get things done. If you have a project in mind, it won't go until you personally push it all the way to the warrant-signing stage. The best example in late years is Mac McGlenn's effort to pave a street. He made it with hardly a meeting to spare, but retired with a lot of satisfaction at having overcome inertia and still produced a lasting improvement for the town.

It's hard to start from scratch if you're not itching to get on in the world.

We have worked out a most careful plan for doing all those things that pile up for the average home owner. Never fail to accomplish at least one thing on the list each day, however small it may be. That way you will find you only slip behind half as fast.

This year's presidential campaign is proving a real rouser. The Republicans have a Rockefeller needling their favorite boy; while the Democrats have Harry upsetting the rosy chariot of the young champion on their side. Meanwhile the old heads sit back and wait to be drafted, importuned or given an opening during which they can snatch the nomination. A week ago both conventions looked cut and dried. Now they have all the anticipated excitement of a press-agented sports event. It may not be part of a well-worked out plan, but the voters are in for a thrilling performance. And may the best men be not too disappointed at being out-maneuvered by the smart politicians who really run the show.

It is said that getting up early on a summer morning is one of the greatest experiences in life. The whole world is yours and nobody else would take it if you woke them up with the offer.

Cuba continues to become more of a problem each day. If we do what we should and whip Castro out of office, we are bullies and warmongers. If we sit back and let him give the country to Russia, we are damn fools. Still, our reputation for being fools in such matters is well established, while our name of "warmonger" is unproven propoganda.

A research scholar has announced that the first words spoken by man were such things as "kill," "strike," and "smash." Who would have thought a dumb brute like the Netherandal man would have been able to speak the language of today?

The facts of life, for some reason, have been lifted from the realm of research into the field of entertainment. It is now necessary to take Junior aside and explain that it isn't all exactly like the movies.

Boys Risk Life, Property

The Skagit County Sheriff's department last week made an investigation of reports that young boys were making a hazardous playground of the upper tram line from the Lone Star quarry to the plant.

They found evidence that some youngsters had been playing on the low towers on top of the hill back of town, had been riding on the buckets from tower to tower, and had made a number of attempts to wreck the tram system by wrapping rags and steel around the cables.

The sheriff has asked the Herald to warn parents of the danger to the boys in riding the buckets or playing around the towers, plus the serious trouble that might arise if they were successful in putting the line out of commission.

Skagit Firemen Active At State Convention

Newhalem and Diablo Volunteer Fire Departments sent teams to the Washington State Firemen's Association and the Washington State Fire Chief's joint annual conference in Port Angeles, June 22 to 25. Attending were: from Newhalem; Larry Stromme, Gus Menne, Earl Hill and Vic Hundahl and their wives: from Diablo; Gene McGill, captain; Harry Newman, Dick Stretch and Ken Hunich. Mrs. Hunich and Mrs. Newman and children attended also.

Diablo VFD won third place in the state for Class C (volunteers) in the demonstration ability test, earning a gold cup which they keep permanently. The test involved laying a hose from a hydrant to a target, knocking it down with water from the hose, then replacing a section of hose and knockng the target down again. Their time was 2 minutes, 25 seconds.

Larry Stromme tied with two others (out of nearly 500) for second place in a written competitive fireman's examination. He lost the gold cup on the toss of a coin, but at least earned it with his score. (He went back over the exam after completing it and changed two answers from right to wrong before turning it in. This should be interesting to City Lighters who are continually taking Civil Service exams.)

Mr. and Mrs. Mick Stitham of Seattle spent the holiday weekend at Diablo Lake Resort and also visited with Mr. and Mrs. Dale Higgins.

CAR-TUNES

"The car seems to have plenty of pick-up, but there is a howling, dragging noise somewhere in the rear . . ."

In talking about "pick-up' he, of course, mean't the usual fine performance of TEXACO gasoline, which is what all of our best customers brag about. The poor guy on the rear bumper didn't really appreciate the ride he was getting.

Watch what happens around your car and you'll never have to explain away a situation like this. Watch where you buy your gas and get your lubrication done and you'll never be worried with car performance. We suggest you stick with Texaco all the way.

OVERHEARD IN THE LUBE ROOM

Garbled proverbs: What is often mistaken for love may be only a passing fanny. Also, many a woman has started out playing with fire and ended up cooking over it.

Mother: "Do you like your new bathing suit, dear?"
Six-year-old: "Yes, but do I have to wear these ear muffs that came with the panties?"

Teeners' Bed-Living Room Is a Family Boon

Combination bedroom-living room give the teenager room to entertain in the smaller home. New color scheme, bed-couch, small dining table and TV helps to effect the transformation.

BY EDNA MILES

Having your living room draped constantly with teenagers is not conducive to a restful feeling. Yet, your teen-agers need a place to entertain their friends. It's their home, too.

Most families can't afford an extra room these days. It means more rent or a more expensive house.

But they can make one room serve the purpose of two. Your teen-age daughter's bedroom can be converted to a bed-sitting-room, or what the Victorians used to refer to as an "apartment".

Here she can, with her friends, listen to those awful records, watch TV and talk endlessly. The room need not be furnished from start to finish with new and expensive furniture.

Secondhand pieces, refinished, can serve nicely. The bed can be transformed into a couch, TV set can be inset in a desk and a small dining table added for snacks.

Give the walls a coat of latex paint as the first step. Pick a color scheme that isn't bedroomy. Cost will be low and the whole family will get a break.

Bible Comment:

Being Rich Means More Than Having Material Wealth

One of the most striking things about the teaching and various incidents in the life of Jesus concerns standards of value, aims and purposes in life. Those that are ordinarily accepted and acted upon are either definitely challenged or revealed as inadequate and lacking in comparison with life at its best.

Take, for example, the case of the successful farmer in Luke. In our time, this New Testament farmer would probably be regarded as a commendable citizen. He did what the average successful farmer would do: Planned for larger things, built new and better buildings, and he showed sense also in planning to do what many successful farmers fail to do.

He was going to enjoy what he had built up. He wasn't just going to keep working, like those who have got the working habit and can't stop. What was the matter with that? A successful farmer could do it all without incurring any displeasure or adverse criticism on the part of his fellowmen.

But in the eyes of God, as Jesus said, he was a fool.

With all his success two things about him were wrong. He was a poor economist. He didn't take into account the uncertainty of his own life and the certainty of death. And he didn't build anything really worth while with all his wealth and his success.

As the parable says, he was not rich toward God. His treasure was all for himself. And Jesus added that everyone who acted that way was like him.

One might ask, what does it mean to be rich toward God? One thing is certain. It has a lot to do with one's fellow man. The whole New Testament is a textbook in being rich toward God.

Cattlemen See Wild Life At Ovenell Ranch

Cattlemen from all parts of the county visited the Double O Ranch on the South Skagit Monday for a field day honoring Norman and Lyle Ovenell, recently named as County Cattlemen of the Year.

The cattlemen first toured the Ovenell farm at Burlington, then came up valley to see the large ranch here.

An unexpected addition to the program which demonstrated that this is still a pioneer country, was the appearance of a bear in one of the fields as the visitors began their tour of the ranch.
